

WABASH FIGHT BECOMING GOOD

Attorney General of Missouri Is Asked To Take A Hand In The Game Now.

QUESTION OF MINORITY CONTROL

Action of Financiers In Issuing Bonds of One Road In Order To Purchase Another Is Held
To Be Consolidation.

[SPECIAL BY SCHIFFS-MORSE.]

St. Louis, Mo., Oct. 5.—Missouri state officials have been asked to take cognizance of certain fundamental points indicated in the injunction suit of President Ramsey of the Wabash and to depose by legal process the minority control of railroad financiering.

Announcement of the state's intention to proceed at law is expected within a day or two, and it is probable that special counsel will be appointed by the Attorney General to conduct the prosecution.

Action of this kind would naturally bear upon the affairs of other roads outside of Missouri whose control is inter-related, and it would lead toward an extension of the ruling in the celebrated Northern Securities case. The question to be determined is whether a group of financiers may legally acquire ownership or control of one road by a small margin, then exercise this control to have the road issue bonds in order to secure control of other roads, and ultimately beget the condition of one group of minority security holders dominating large systems, which in fact they do not own.

Fear Intervention by State.
The definite question will be whether it is legal by such manipulation for an "active and energetic minority" to manage the properties of an "inactive majority."

When the Ramsey petition for an injunction was filed financiers expressed concern that the suit might be followed by official action in Missouri and elsewhere and exhibit the whole method of "railroad" consolidation. The Missouri procedure will be independent of the Ramsey suit, and Mr. Ramsey, so far as is known, will have no connection with it. But some of the evidence which is to be produced in the Ramsey suit will probably serve as the basis for the consolidated action.

Friends of Mr. Ramsey said that the suit to prevent the Wabash election at Toledo Tuesday likely will prevent Mr. Gould's being elected to the presidency of the Wabash and perhaps also being elected to the chairmanship of the Wabash board of directors. It may also, they said, cause the removal from the Wabash of Vice President A. C. Bird, who directs traffic on the Missouri Pacific, Iron Mountain and the Wabash lines.

Can't Hold Offices in Two Roads.
The laws of Missouri provide that an official of one line cannot hold office in a competing line. The contention of Mr. Ramsey is that the Missouri Pacific and the Wabash are competing lines, at least between St. Louis and Kansas City, and that Gould and Bird cannot be officials in both. This connection may not affect Mr. Gould's plans with regard to the Wabash, as it is believed here that he does not wish to be elected president. He proposes, it is thought, to have Vice President Delano elected to this office.

Another contention is that the office of vice president, in charge of traffic on all the Gould lines, was moved from St. Louis to Chicago with the special object of putting Mr. Bird beyond the province of the Missouri law.

Mr. Ramsey alleges that the Gould interests first obtained control of the Missouri Pacific and then of the Iron Mountain and that they are endeavoring through the control of these two roads to control the Wabash.

Another Move.
Mr. Ramsey, this morning received from Judge Taylor a subpoena duces tecum directing the officers of the Wabash and the Missouri Pacific railways to produce on Friday morning the stock-book of those roads showing the Gould holdings, and packers

INSURANCE PEOPLE ARE ON THE RACKS

Thorough Investigation Of The Conditions Of The Insurance Business.

[SPECIAL BY SCHIFFS-MORSE.]

New York, Oct. 5.—Edward I. Devlin, head of the real estate department of the New York Life, was a witness in the insurance investigation this morning. He was examined as regards the realty investments of the company. He showed the millions invested net an income of only from less than one per cent to a little under three. The average yield from the real estate is only 3.7 per cent. He declared the investments at these low rates were made under a previous regime of the company. Devlin was excused and Cornelius C. White, auditor of the New York Life, was called to the stand. He said a hundred and eleven thousand dollars given to Andrew Hamilton was charged to the tax account. In September, 1904, seventy-five thousand dollars was given Hamilton and charged to taxes and transferred to the account of "contingent expenses." White was then excused. William F. Thummler, in the same capacity for the Mutual Life as Hamilton is for the New York Life, was called. He said the Equitable, the New York Life, and the Mutual apportioned the legislative tax work. He said once a "certain person" gave him a "certain sum" for a "specific" purpose. When pressed for more definite information, he said he used it to create public sentiment and prevent vicious legislation at Des Moines, Iowa. He said each of the three companies paid a share of the expenses.

Thummler admitted the Mutual had contributed $25,000 to the republican campaign fund.

Thummler said he never had authorized a single cent of influence to a legislator and did not know of its ever having been done. Robert H. McCurdy, general manager of the Mutual, also testified.

This Morning.

Sarah Kenyon, otherwise known as Sadie Martyn, one of the two runaways who were apprehended in Chicago and brought back to Jamesville last week, appeared in municipal court this morning and amended her plea of "not guilty" to "guilty" to the charge of fornication for which prosecution had been commenced against her. When asked if she had anything to say why sentence should not be pronounced she indicated that she had nothing, and the court levied a fine of $25 and costs, amounting in all to over $32, in lieu of which she would serve forty days in the county jail. The young woman has not yet paid her fine, but expects to do so in a few days. In the meantime she will remain in the county jail. It is believed that she amended her plea on the advice of her mother, who will probably pay the fine for her. Frank R. Baldwin, who accompanied the young woman on the flight to Chicago, will have his trial on the charge of adultery tomorrow morning. There was a large gallery in the court room this morning.

MURDER TALKED AS TO STREED

Newly Discovered Evidence Tends To Confirm
This View of The Man's Death.

MAY BE A VICTIM OF A VENDETTA

States Attorney And Sheriff Agree That Indications Point
To Murder After Refusing To Pay Blackmail.

[SPECIAL BY SCHIFFS-MORSE.]

Cambridge, Ill., Oct. 5.—Newly discovered evidence and new theories are now occupying the attention of the police in the investigation of the cause of death of Attorney John V. Streed.

State's Attorney Sturtz and Sheriff Stiers were in Rock Island investigating evidence bearing on the murder theory. The authorities admit that the newly discovered evidence points strongly in that direction. They say that matters have been brought to their attention that will take several days to investigate, and that this new evidence, the nature of which they refuse to divulge, if it proves true, will substantiate the murder theory and land the murderer behind the bars. They substantially admitted that this new evidence was along the line claimed by the relatives of the dead man from the first, that Streed was the victim of a vendetta, and behind the vendetta is the gang of blackmailers that attempted to operate here.

Victim Was Forewarned.

O. E. Sandquist of Cambridge received a letter from the Rev. A. F. Benson of Evanston, Ill., who was a short time ago pastor of the Swedish M. E. church at Andover, a small town four miles west of here, to the effect that Streed had told him just after the Dr. Powell suicide on Aug. 26 that he expected to be murdered. The Rev. Mr. Benson did not state in this letter whether Streed said for what reason or from what source he expected to be murdered.

FIRE CAUSES A $600,000 LOSS

Four Hundred Families Are Rendered
Homeless When Flames Sweep
Eight Blocks at Rhinelander.

Rhinelander, Wis., Oct. 5.—Fire in the lumber district of this town Wednesday evening destroyed property valued at $600,000 and rendered 400 people homeless. The fire started in the lumber yard of the Brown Brothers Lumber company, and after sweeping it clean spread to the Robbins Lumber company yards, which were entirely destroyed. A high wind was blowing, which carried the fire into the residence district adjoining the lumber yards, destroying about seventy-five small dwelling houses. About 40,000,000 feet of lumber was destroyed. After burning over the greater portion of eight blocks the fire was got under control. The homeless people are being cared for in the city hall and other public buildings. The total insurance is about $400,000.

The principal losers are:
Brown Brothers Lumber company, $250,000; insurance, $175,000.
Robbins Lumber company, $225,000; insurance, $165,000.
Two schoolhouses and engine-house, $25,000.
Dwelling houses, about $75,000.

COLLEGE BRED ROBBER KILLED

Sees Sweetheart Led to Altar by Another and Goes West to Become Highwayman.

Sioux City, Iowa, Oct. 5.—When John Conway was killed in the act of robbing a bank at Berkeley, Cal., Tuesday night the career of one of the most remarkable thieves in America was terminated. Conway was the son of wealthy parents in Chicago, a college graduate, and a thorough good fellow. He became a criminal after seeing his sweetheart led to the altar by a rival, and said he would die with his boots on.

He was captured here six years ago in a desperate battle with the police after holding up the Horse Shoe restaurant. He was thoroughly educated, and so entertaining that the Rev. list church undertook to reform him. One of the leading young women of the church fell in love with him.

He had given an alias, but she prevailed upon him to disclose his true name. She wrote his brother, Stephen Conway, who, he said, was superintendent of Armour & Co.'s plant at Chicago, and the brother obtained his release on bond. Conway then fled and has since then pursued his career of crime.

to meet his death.
Frank Streed, a brother of the dead lawyer, ridicules the theory held by the authorities that Streed had committed suicide because of financial difficulties.

"My brother may have been in financial difficulties," said Mr. Streed, "I do not know that he was not, but I do know that he did know where he could get assistance at any time for the asking. There is absolutely no truth nor reason in the theory that my brother took his life for this reason. If he had needed amounts much greater than the authorities declare he owed, he could have secured this amount at any time from his wife. No, sir, my brother was murdered and we will prove it all in good time."

Opinions in Conflict.
While Coroner McArthur and State's Attorney Sturtz each believe Streed was murdered and Sheriff Stiers and Deputy Sheriff Swain each hold to the suicide theory as the correct solution, yet there is no discord over the matter. The authorities are investigating carefully every clue that points in either direction.

"We are each open to conviction," said Deputy Sheriff Swain, "and none of us has such firmly rooted theories that he cannot see the evidence that leads in the other direction and place the proper value on it. None of us can be certain that his theories are right. The truth is yet in doubt. There is no evidence connecting prominent Cambridge people with this matter as has been rumored."

[SPECIAL BY SCHIFFS-MORSE.]
New York, Oct. 5.—Two boys and a girl, between six and eight years of age, children of Charles Donnelly, were burned to death in a row of houses this morning. The father and mother were probably fatally burned. Nine others were seriously injured. Six families were saved by firemen. Tease and James Nugent, Tease saw the flames break from the house while standing off duty on a corner. He turned in an alarm and then joined a companion who had arrived in the meantime. He found the doors locked and secured a ladder and entered through a window. He found the Donnelly family unconscious. He cried out and aroused others, most of whom had to be carried to safety.

TURTLE SCHOOL BOARD SPEAKS

REGARDING 'IMBROGLIO' OVER
CLOSED SCHOOL HOUSE.

CHARGE OF CROOKED WORK

Is Denied With Emphasis By C. W. Shimeall, Matt F. Lathers And Nelson Wheeler, Tax payers With Them

"We have not been doing anything unfair and someone may have to suffer for the slanderous statements that have been made regarding our actions," said C. W. Shimeall, treasurer of the school board of district No. 9, town of Turtle, last evening. Mr. Shimeall was accompanied on a visit to Janesville by Matt F. Lathers, a director, and Nelson Wheeler, clerk of the board, against whom an action has been commenced in municipal court for failure to call a special meeting at the demand of six electors. "Ninety per cent of the taxpayers want that school to remain closed," he continued, "and the vote at the mass-meeting was 21 to 17 in favor of that proposition. There was nothing irregular in the count. Right around Turtleville there is a floating population whom we designate as 'Coxey's army' and they, together with some politicians in Shiocton, have been stirring up all this trouble."

Not What It Used to Be
"Why do we want the school to remain closed?" Well, the proposition is simple this: The school district was established thirty-five years ago when Turtleville had a distillery, a flour mill, a wood-working factory, and other enterprises, all of which have since disappeared. Now there are about two old houses occupied. The school was not open last year but during the year previous the average attendance was four. The building is in a dilapidated state and it would cost from $485 to $750 to place it in good condition, according to estimates that have been actually submitted.

Want a New District
"With the small attendance, taxpayers have naturally been opposed to keeping it open any longer. They advocate the creation of a new district by annexing sections of districts 3, 1 and 5, 2 and 6, and the placing of the schoolhouse in the center. Under this arrangement no family would be at a greater distance than a mile and three-quarters and my own children would have the greatest distance to go of any in the section. As a matter of fact, children of members of the school board constitute a majority of all in the district attending school at the present time. Of the people opposed to our plan there are only one or two who own property, but this does not prevent them from their wives from voting. They came to the last mass-meeting and voted and they can come and vote whenever one is called."

It was brought out that the average wage received by Pennsylvania miners was larger than the average salaries of Wisconsin Congregational clergymen. In a talk on graft and corruption by the Rev. L. L. Cory it was stated that the present moment is psychological in national history and is the nick of time for Wisconsin on the subject of boodling. Frenzied finance, insurance, and other "systems" were denounced. In his report on salaries of ministers the Rev. H. A. Miner of Dodgeville said that too many ministers are asked to work for less than $600 a year. Of 214 churches in Wisconsin, but 53 pay salaries of from $1,000 to $1,500. He also added that while there has been a growth in membership in the last five years from 22,856 to 25,444 in Wisconsin, the Sunday school and Christian Endeavor are falling off. The Rev. Henry Stauffer of Milwaukee said that nothing can be gained by taking an hysterical view of the discouraging situation in evangelistic work. He said that pastors were mainly responsible and that they ought to have the highest degree of efficiency. He demanded that there be an awakening of people to the fact that the church is in danger of losing its place to selfishness and money making.

LABELS ARE MEANT TO MISLEAD PUBLIC

Dairy And Food Commissioner Emery Up Against Manufacturers' Tricks.

A swarm of food manufacturers and dealers are presenting to Dairy and Food Commissioner Emery a herculean task by asking him to pass upon innumerable ingenious labels of food products. Many of them are apparently designed with the single purpose of technically satisfying the "anti-false label" law without in fact ceasing to mislead the public. Commissioner Emery is striving to secure compliance with the law so that people will not buy articles under wrong impressions as to their purity or ingredients. Some manufacturers have contrived labels that are now outlawed. Compliance is aimed at by the addition of the real description of the food proposed to be sold, but the additional words are printed on the label in very small type. In an inconspicuous place so as to escape notice. Some of these devices may be in technical compliance with the law, but they are not pleasing to the dairy and food commissioner and a test case or two may result from the efforts of the officials to secure fairness and honesty in the labeling of food products. One firm of syrup dealers was selling a sugar mixture, colored and flavored, as pure maple syrup. The mixture contained no maple and the law rendered the label improper. Therefore, in order to retain the word "maple" on the label, the firm changed its name and called itself "Maple Co.," which name appears in two conspicuous places on the label. Then the mixture is labeled "pure" and the result is a label that is practically certain to mislead the buyers into thinking that pure maple syrup is meant.

ATHOL ROLLINS IS ON WAY TO OXFORD

Sailed From Philadelphia Saturday Last—Will Study Comparative Philology.

Athol E. Rollins of Oshkosh, winner of one of the Wisconsin Rhodes scholarships, in Oxford University, England, who last year was a member of the Janesville high school faculty, being instructor of Greek and Latin, is now on his way across the Atlantic to England. He sailed from Philadelphia Saturday and will this fall enter one of the colleges of the greatest educational institution on the globe, specializing in comparative philology. Mr. Rollins is undoubtedly the youngest man upon whom the honor of one of these scholarships will ever be conferred being but twenty-one years of age. He was born in Yorkville, a village in Racine county and is the son of Rev. Dr. Rollins, pastor of the Albion Methodist Church of Oshkosh. He attended the public schools in various parts of this country and Canada, his father being called to churches in places widely separated and in different

ATHOL E. ROLLINS Winner of Rhodes Scholarship.

He entered high school at Lake Mills, attended the Evansville institution during the second and third years of his course and completed his preparatory training by a year at Wayland Academy, Beaver Dam. His four years of university and college training were all received at Lawrence University, Appleton. Throughout his college career Mr. Rollins was very prominent and popular. He was a member of the Phi Kappa literary society and the Delta Lambda fraternity, represented his class on three pentathlon teams in inter-class meets, played in the Glee club and was president of the class of 1904 in his graduating year. He was vice president one term of the college oratorical league. As a student he succeeded in accomplishing what few others do, receiving first honors in both Sophomore and junior years, and second honors in his senior year. All honors due anyone taking the classical course of study were awarded to him when a sophomore for general scholarship, and the medals in Greek and Latin. At the commencement exercises he took the leading role in the play, which was written by a member of the class. He graduated with highest honors and the degree of Bachelor of Arts was conferred upon him. During his senior year Dr. Wright, teacher of Latin, was taken ill and Mr. Rollins supplied for him for a month. Mr. Rollins was a candidate for one of the Rhodes scholarships in 1904 but by a very narrow margin was defeated in the race by one who was several years his elder and his superior in athletic attainments. In 1905 Mr. Rollins had no difficulty in far exceeding all other aspirants and was given the prize. The scholarship provides for $1,500 per year for three years. In his second year he had, first, to his list, second, to his fondness for a success in many outdoor sports, such as cricket, football, and the like; third, the qualifications of manhood, such as truth, courage, devotion to duty, sympathy for and protection of the weak, kindness, unselfishness, and fellowship; fourth, his exhibition during school days of moral force of character and instincts to lead and take interest in his schoolmates, for these latter attributes will likely in future life guide him to esteem the performance of public duties as his highest aim.

CORNELIUS DYKEMAN CLAIMED BY DEATH

Has Resided In The Town of Bradford For More Than Sixty-two Years of His Seventy.

Bradford, October 4.—Another old resident of Rock county, Cornelius Dykeman, died Sunday afternoon, Oct. 1, 1905, at his home in Smithton. Mr. Dykeman had been ill for several months and his recovery had been considered doubtful for some time. The deceased was born in Schoharie county, New York, May 8, 1835, and came with his parents to Walworth county, Wisconsin, when he was five years of age where he resided for two years when they moved to Rock county and has since lived in Bradford. In May 19, 1857, he was married to Gertrude Ann Teasdale, who preceded him to the better world June 15, 1890. To them nine children were born, seven of whom are still living, three daughters and four sons: Miss Marion Smith of Oklahoma, Mrs. Will Johnson, Mrs. Anna McCarthy, wife of Delavan, Wis., George and Bert all residents of this place. There is also left to mourn his loss two brothers, John of Fairfield and Wesley of Darien. In early manhood Mr. Dykeman joined the Methodist Episcopal church of this place and has been a faithful member. He was always interested in the welfare and improvement of the community and in his home life was ever looking to the comfort of others. The funeral services were held at the church Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock and were conducted by Rev. H. H. Kafer and Rev. Bulley of Clinton. The song service was rendered by Mrs. Ellis and Bunn and Messrs. Jones and Palchen. The four sons and two brothers of the deceased acted as pall bearers. The Clinton Camp of G. A. R. attended in a body and escorted the remains to their last resting place in the village cemetery. Carl of Thanks.

We, the children of the deceased, desire to express our heartfelt thanks to those who so kindly assisted us during the recent illness of our father, Cornelius Dykeman, also the G. A. R. comrades and especially to the Clinton Quartette.

FLOATING DOWN THE RIVER IN A LAUNCH

Two Watertown Boys Paid Janesville A Visit Yesterday Afternoon On Trip.

Louis Parks and his brother of Watertown were in the city yesterday afternoon on route to Rockford via the Rock river. They left Watertown on Tuesday morning in a twenty-foot gasoline launch and after carting around the two dams in this city camped between here and Beloit today. They spent Tuesday night at Lake Koshkonong and passed the Indian Ford dam by the wagon ferry established by George McKee and F. E. Pierson this last spring. They expected to make Rockford this afternoon and will then go as far south of that city as they can before Saturday night.

NO REDUCTION RATES ON SMALLPOX CASES

George W. Phelps Resigns Management of Detention Hospital Because Cause Bill of $80 Was Cut to $60.

Because, as he alleges, the city council refused to pay in full the bill of $80 he presented for taking care of two smallpox patients, George W. Phelps has resigned the management of the detention hospital and will move out at once. Mr. and Mrs. Phelps have been at the hospital for the past six years. The bill presented was on the basis of $5 a day for sixteen days. Health Officer McCarthy deemed the charges too high inasmuch as the cases were not severe ones and the patients were able to dress and otherwise take care of themselves. He refused to attach his O. K. and the council reduced the bill to $60.

FOOTBALL TEAM HAS NOT ENOUGH GINGER

University Players Seem To Lack Genuine Interest In The Game Thus Far.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.] Madison, Wis., Oct. 5.—Unless colder weather sets in from now until the Wisconsin-Chicago game here October 21, that contest will find the Badger football team either over-trained or far from the development to which the coaches are determined to bring the eleven. For the last ten days summer temperatures have prevailed and Dr. Kraenzlein, trainer of the Badgers, has restrained the coaches from giving them the degree of strenuous work that King and Holt desire to administer. The results of the preliminary training camp at Marinette were not as good as hoped for on account of the failure of some of the best candidates to report, and the laxity and reluctance displayed on the part of the material here added to the delay. The hot weather has augmented this adverse situation to such an extent that recovery will hardly be fully made even if the best weather conditions ensue. The game last Saturday with Naperville college and the game Wednesday with Marquette college both plainly showed that the game of the Badgers was far from perfect. While there was good individual playing, team work was lacking and there was not that finish and accuracy that comes with hard practice scrimmages and which is supposed to characterize intercollegiate championship games. Some coaches are of the opinion that the Chicago team has not had much better conditions. It is felt here that even now the Badgers are better than the maroons, stronger individually, except for Eckersall, and fully as far in the season's development. The winning of the Chicago game has thus far been the goal of the Badger ambition, and it appears that the spirit here is one of much confidence as to that contest.

RAIN BADLY WANTED BY ALL INDUSTRIES

Merchants And Farmers Both Want Plenty of Moisture At Once—Good For Trade.

Farmers are complaining of the dry weather that has prevailed in this section for several weeks. Some of those living in the country who have fall plowing that they would like to do, that it is impossible to do any of this work because of the dry condition of the land. Many men have given up the idea of trying to put in the fall because of the dryness and lateness of the season. Those who have sowed this crop are disappointed in having it dried up by weather and winds, although there is an occasional piece that was in early enough so that it is just danger from this source.

Report from the country also indicate that wells are going dry. Cisterns will soon be suffering generally unless relief is soon experienced. A good drizzling shower is needed for many reasons, although the continued warm weather is of benefit to late pieces of corn.

Merchants want a rain and cooler weather no less than the country people. Men are wearing their spring suits, and summer hats yet and women are wearing light dresses and white shoes, although it is October. Fall stocks remain intact and will until there comes a change in climatic conditions. Rubber shoes are not much needed, and it has occurred to no one to order a winter overcoat—or even a fall one for that matter.

CLEANLY WOMAN

Erroneously Thinks by Scouring Her Scalp That She Cures Dandruff.

Cleanly woman has an erroneous idea that by scouring the scalp, which removes the dandruff scales, she is curing the dandruff. She may wash her scalp every day, and yet have dandruff her life long, accompanied by falling hair, too. The only way in the world to cure dandruff is to kill the dandruff germ, and there is but one hair preparation that will do that but Newbro's Herpicide. Herpicide by killing the dandruff germ, leaves the hair free to grow as healthy Nature intended. Destroy the cause you remove the effect. Kill the dandruff germ with Herpicide. How Athletes Keep Strong and Healthy

Their Diet Should Be a Revelation To Men And Women in the Ordinary Walks of Life.

At this season of the year thousands of young men are devoting several hours a day to the development of their physical strength and endurance and their athletic skill. In practically every university, college, academy, and public school in the United States and Canada the football "squads" are at the height of their activities in preparation for the big games yet to come. From mid-afternoon until long after daylight has gone, their trainers rush them through their plays, now striving to improve this point, now that.

Physical perfection, great endurance and unflinching health are positively essential in such severe athletic work and nothing that helps to develop and maintain these qualities in the athlete is overlooked or neglected. Perhaps the most important point in the estimation of successful trainers and coaches is the diet of the athlete.

In schools where a "training table" is provided for the athlete, only the most nutritious food is served, and in cases where there is no training table the athlete is advised to eat the most healthful food only. Whether or not he follows such advice is soon shown by his physical condition. If shown by his physical condition, the average man—the business man, the lawyer, the teacher, the clerk, the mechanic, the laborer—look such care as to the food he eats as the athlete does, there would be far less of sickness and suffering in this world.

Among athletes the food value of whole wheat is recognized. They have demonstrated what scientists have long declared to be true: that the various food elements found in wheat are the food elements with which the blood and muscle, the tissues and cells, the bone and brain of the human body must be replenished if life and perfect strength are to be sustained.

Every nutritive element of the best white wheat grown is found in Malta-Vita, and it is fast becoming as popular among other people as it long has been among athletes. And Malta-Vita is so good to eat! Always deliciously crisp and refreshing and satisfying. A perfect breakfast is impossible without Malta-Vita, and it's good three times a day. Try a bowl full with cream or fruit. You will thank us for telling you about it. All grocers sell Malta-Vita now for 30 cents per package. Always ready to eat.

Fair and cooler.

"To fear the worst oft cures
the worst." Some merchants
have been "scared into success," having concluded, as a desperate remedy, to "plunge"
in newspaper advertising.

The average chauffeur has a good deal to learn besides "running the machine."

Pfister don't like the idea of being prosecuted by the Milwaukee district
attorney, and nobody blames him.

Cassie Chadwick is about to change
her residence to the Ohio peniten-entiary, where she will reside for a number of years.

The Empire mining stock is now quoted at $1000 per share. Some of the stock is held in Janesville. It pays a cash dividend of $10 per share
every ten days.

The merchants of Milwaukee deplore the blenish which rests on the city as the result of the grand jury
investigation, and are taking concerted action to remove it.

Pat Crow, of Omaha fame, has finally been arrested at Butte, Montana.
Justice has been slow in finding him
and the chances are that he will escape with light punishment.

The arm is strengthened by work

mind is subject to the same conditions. The mind that thinks and works becomes rugged and alert,
ready to cope with the problems of life as presented. There are too many lazy minds.

THE SQUARE DEAL.

President Roosevelt is known today as the man who advocates and practices the "square deal." The title
may not be elegant but it is very significant and intensely American.

The fact is well recognized that President Roosevelt has won the hearts of the people in rare degree
and he enjoys their love and confidence to the fullest extent.

His attitude towards corporate wealth, as well as towards organized labor, has been fair and impartial.
The former has been given to understand that there is a limit to greed
and monopoly, while the latter has been made to realize that the right of every man to work is regarded by the President as a God-given right, and therefore sacred.

On the question of rate making
power for railroads, he is frequently
misquoted and purposely misunderstood. He does not advocate government control, nor the arbitrary fixing
of rates by the Interstate Commerce Commission. He does maintain, however, that the Commission should be clothed with authority to adjust rates
where great dissatisfaction prevails,
believing that all shippers are entitled
to a square deal.

The rebate system, which contributed so largely to the wealth of the Standard Oil company for many years
he regards as vicious in the extreme
and this opinion is endorsed by the railway companies, as well as by all fair minded people.

Mr. Roosevelt is popular with all classes of people except the politicians, who are jealous of him and a little cotorial in Wall Street whose schemes have been thwarted.

He is a larger man than the people
of this country usually elect to the office of chief magistrate and because of this fact is subjected to the criticism which envy always engenders,
but he is a man of the people and
but for the fact that he has taken
himself out of the presidential race in 1908, no combination of circumstances
could prevent his unanimous nomination. The people believe in a square deal and they love the president who possesses the courage to demand it.

SOMEONE IS REMISS.

"The question may be asked," says Newspaperdom, "why merchants or dealers will allow their home markets
to be deflected and monopolized by foreign and out-of-town dealers, when
a little advertising will keep local buyers in the home market. Thousands of simple articles of merchandise sold in the hardware and implement stores of New York City today
are bought elsewhere by local buyers
through the medium of mail order journals. If a distant competitor can afford to advertise these same materials in the mail order mediums,

which usually charge fully five times
as much for their space, according to circulation, why cannot the local dealer by judicious advertising retain this trade and keep the money in the home channels? There is a broad field for progressive business enterprise in this line which has never been properly exploited, and a little careful study of the subject cannot fail to devise some means of opening up local markets for home dealers
who are losing customers daily for want of knowledge on the part of the buyer that a certain desirable article
is on sale by a city dealer."

This little paragraph hits the nail squarely on the head. Mail order houses secure every dollar's worth of business which they enjoy as the results of information furnished through catalogues.

Those catalogues are filled with cuts and descriptions of all kinds of merchandise, and every last article
has a price which to the average reader seems low, because the average reader is not posted on prices in any market.

The family buys a stove, or a piece
of furniture perhaps once in five years. The mail order catalogue is consulted because the local paper contains no information and as a result
the article purchased frequently costs
more money than would have been paid in the home market.

The most surprising thing is that local merchants do not seem to appreciate the situation and by intelligent effort hold the trade which belongs to them.

It is useless to sit idly by and complain that this kind of competition
can't be met. The men who do this have no right to obstruct the channels of business. They are a detriment to the community where they live and a disgrace to the trade.

Any wide awake merchant can meet competition if he will go at it with a determination to win, and there is no
way to win except through publicity.
While the local newspaper is not the only method of publicity, it is by far
the most practical method.

It talks to the people that the local merchant wants to reach, and it can be made to talk just as efficiently as
the mail order price list.

Advertising in a general way is a waste of money, but advertising in a specific way is the best investment
that any man in the retail trade can make. Cut prices are not necessary, but prices are. Say something and then back it up with the goods and
trade will follow as sure as the night
follows the day.

THE PEOPLE TO BLAME.

Much discussion is going on nowadays about corruption in office and
many municipalities are investigating graft and dishonesty, on the part of public officials. The people are amazed
and shocked at existing conditions
and charge responsibility to the impersonal "they," rather than to the personal "we" where it belongs.

The government of any city is exactly what "we the people" elect to have it, and the fact has been demonstrated time and again that the better element is in the majority in every community.

New York, Chicago, Philadelphia,
St. Louis, and other large cities have demonstrated ability to put down corruption and establish wholesome government, when the better class of voters have united forces, making law
and order the issue, and voting as one man.

The will of the majority is always supreme in a republic, but the majority, in many cases, are so indifferent, and the minority so active, that good measures are defeated, and the city cursed with dishonest and incompetent officials.

The weakness of American government today is indifference on the part of a large class of voters who shirk responsibility by staying away from
the primaries and many of them neglecting to vote on election day. Gov.
Bark of Missouri sized up the situation correctly when he said:

"If the people want good government they can have it, but they must want it with an active desire and they must insist upon having it. The indifference of voters is the greatest menace to a republican form of government."

"Most people are honest, but they are inactively so, while the vicious majority are perniciously active. It is not enough to be merely honest.
We need more fighters in the army
of peace. Aggressive methods only will stamp out graft and corruption."

"There are no 'necessary evils' in government about which all good citizens have a right to complain. If the honest voters would assert themselves, however, they could have local and national government of which they could be proud."

"Good men will observe even bad
laws, and bad men will break even good laws. All men, good and bad,
should be compelled to obey every
law, good and bad, because it is a law. Disregard of one law breeds
disrespect of all law."

"Many persons thrill with patriotic fervor at the thought of risking their lives on the battlefield, but they forget to vote on election day. The patriotism of peace is as necessary as the patriotism of war. The man who will live every day for his city and state is needed more by the government than is the man willing to die
for his country."

"The best citizen seldom goes to the primaries and often fails to vote—
two duties that the bad citizen never neglects. And when bad men elect
a bad man to office they support him loyally in the evil he does. That is the chief cause of corruption in American municipalities."

"Let him who, without good cause,
avoids his simple duty of casting a ballot, be barred by law from all the privileges that flow from citizenship."

Men appreciate something that they are in danger of losing.

"In a word, we need the honest votes of honest men. When these unite and stay united, demanding
honesty in the conduct of public affairs, then graft will become unknown."

open a conversation, speaking of the
lovely weather, the pleasant walk,
etc., the professor answering merely
"Yes." Finally the professor said severely: "Young man, we have been walking together for half an hour and you have said nothing which was not commonplace and stupid." "True,"
answered the boy, his wrath passing
his modesty, "and you indorsed every word I said." Then they shook hands
and word went home from the professor that the boy was all right and that they were great friends.

Whitewater Register: The Appleton Post exhorts the republicans of Wisconsin to "get together." This is superfluous advice; they are together now, good and solid. And if the "fair minded" democrats and half breeds will join hands with them in the patriotic duty of laboring for the best interests of the state, Wisconsin
can be pulled out of the quagmire of dissension and general disturbance
into which it has been precipitated
the last few years. It will take time to restore it to the proud position
which it once occupied, in the estimation of the country, but it can be done. And the sooner that all conservative, sensible people "get together" and re-adopt sane, legitimate methods in business and politics, the sooner will other states cease jeering
at Wisconsin as a cheap understudy
of Kansas.

Pond du Lac Commonwealth: An item in one of the state papers with
the headline, "How Will He Get John Dietz?" serves to remind the public that this nervy young man is still in possession of the Cameron dam. It is worthy of note that the most of the campaigns against Dietz have been waged on paper, elaborate announcements having been given to the press in advance, of just how the capture was to be effected. Several detectives have acquired fame in this way and other officers are said

to be now at work on the conundrum
and as soon as they have arrived at
an original solution, they will doubtless announce it for the benefit of Mr. Dietz and themselves. In the meantime, it does not seem to have occurred to any of them that the way
to get Dietz was simply to get him
and keep still about it till after they were ready to deliver the goods.

New York Tribune: According to the American Jewish Year Book, just published, there are 1,418,812 Jews in the United States, and of these about 750,000 are residents of the State of New York. In the year ended June 30, 1905 118,419 Jewish immigrants
came to this country, of whom more than 100,000 landed in New York. For many years this class of immigrants
has shown a decided preference for this city, and consequently nearly one-half of the whole Jewish population of the country lives in the metropolis, which is the largest Jewish city in the world. The statistician counts New York City with about 600,000 Jewish inhabitants, which is more than the entire Jewish population of the German Empire. There are fewer than 300,000 Jews in the British Empire, and fewer than 500, 000 in Turkey. In Palestine there are 78,000 Jews, about as many as there are in the new Jewish district
in Harlem; and there are fewer Jews
in Egypt today than there are in the 8th Ward of the city of New York.
From 1881 to July, 1905, 945,842 Jews
immigrated to this country, and of these one-eighth came last year. The port of New York is credited with having received 103,341 Jews, which is more than the whole Jewish population of France, and more than the combined Jewish population of Egypt, Italy and Bulgaria. Two countries have more Jews than the United States: Russia, 5,215,805, and Austria-Hungary, 2,076,378.

ON CHARACTER BUILDING.

Following are brief quotations from Charles Wagner's latest book, "On Life's Threshold."

"We belong to humanity, which is
a large family, whose principal malady,
transmitted the world over to all
its members, is a sort of innate savag-
eness toward our fellow-beings.
From this chief vice come all the
minor vices."

"Be some one; God wishes it. Otherwise there would not be so many different natures and temperaments."

"The trouble with most of us is that we do not realize what we owe ourselves. To appear well to exert ourselves, to do well in business, we must necessarily think pretty well of ourselves."

"The end of man is to develop his body and brain as much as possible,
in order finally to be of service to his fellow-men."

"Education consists in enlightening,
directing and disciplining our will, not
in breaking it."

"In the moral world the earth on which we build is truth."

"Truth is the salvation of the world.
It is the friend of all, even of whom
it strikes. Wounds made by truth
heal and cleanse; cesspools of falsehood poison and kill."

MONTHS OF MARRIAGE.

June is first choice.

Russia's favorite marriage month is January.

About an eighth of Scotch marriage
take place in June.

In Holland girls prefer to become blushing brides in May.

Germany favors April, regarding it
as the first of the spring months.

One-seventh of the Swedish marriages occur in "the month of roses."

February is the first choice in Italy,
especially in the period preceding the beginning of Lent.

MUSINGS OF A DYSPHEPTIC.

A man is never too old to unlearn.

Home-made advice is generally as good as any other.

The difference between a luxury
and a necessity is merely getting used
to it.

It's all right to scatter seeds of kindness, but don't throw them to the birds.

One reason why the girls with high ideals never marry is because no one wants them.

If it wasn't for the young men just out of college the rest of us wouldn't realize how little we know.

Objection to Sunday Funerals.

The vicar of All Hallows, a British vicar, objects to Sunday funerals on the ground that they keep people from the higher duties of worship, cast a shadow of sorrow on the brightest day
of the week, break the day of rest,
and lead people to seek comfort in the poor consolation of a big funeral.

JOSH BILLINGS' PHILOSOPHY.

Life is a continual struggle to get
bread, and then to eat it, before summer voracious kuss steals it.

The highest rate of interest we pay
in this world is on borrowed trouble,
and get the least in return for the investment.

Life is a comedy, and all mankind
are the actors; and without the supes the stars would loose much of their brilliancy.

Wit, like the native diamond, has
an intrinsic value; but, like the diamond, much of its luster depends upon the cutting and the setting.

Early impressions are the most lasting. If I should live to be as old as Methuselah, I never forget the first time my mother spread me on her lap
and visited me with the bottom of her slipper.

Pure grit is more often put up in small packages than big ones. The little bantam is always ready to bite
the huge shanghai at short range; and I have often seen the slender-waisted
hornet make a big, fat skoolioy lay down his dinner by the roadside and
run for dear life.—New York Weekly.

Moses as a Sanitarian.
Moses himself was a sanitarian of
no mean accomplishments, and many of the principles established by him
in sanitary science might well be exploited in modern times. The type of camp which he established for the detention of unfortunate lepers, well
modified to suit modern principles,
would serve for the check and practical elimination of consumption.—Sci-

Twenty Dollars To The Good.

A well-known man of this city has a wife and four children to provide for and clothe for the winter. His wife also sorely needed her teeth fixed up before cold weather set in. In considering what dentist to employ the matter of saving at least half on the dental bill came up and they decided that they would consult Dr. Richards because he is not in the local high-price combine. Instead of having her teeth pulled out she saved them by having four gold crowns put on. The combine dentists get $10 straight, whereas Dr. Richards put them on for her for $5 each. By employing Dr. Richards the father of this family made a clean saving of $20 or enough to buy warm winter suits for his whole bunch of boys, while his wife got the very best of dental work in every respect. What this family saved you can save if you have Dr. Richards do your dentistry.

GIRL PREVENTED A CATASTROPHE

ON MINERAL POINT DIVISION OF ST. PAUL RY.

HATTIE LENTZ IS HEROINE

Who Discovered That Fire Had Destroyed Bridge Two Miles From Here—And Flagged The Extra Freight.

Coolness and presence of mind, accompanied by ability to act quickly in a moment of danger, are not wholly confined to the melodramas. Engineer Thomas Fox, Fireman Boltz, Conductor Priddy, Head Brakeman Ben Millman, and Brakeman Sid Northrup, who manned the extra freight train ordered out from here over the Mineral Point division of the St. Paul railroad between the noon hour and one o'clock yesterday, probably owe their lives to an eighteen-year-old girl.

Found Bridge Had Burned
It was Hattie Lentz, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Lentz, who live on the Richards farm on the town line about four miles west of Janesville, who discovered that bridge No. 28, which spans a deep gully about a mile and a half southwest of Janesville, had been partially destroyed by fire that was still smoldering. No one was with her or within call. Realizing the danger she hastened to station herself where she might hope to stop any train in time to avert the terrible catastrophe which impended should it reach the bridge. She had not been on guard long before the sound of one coming from the east reached her and she hastened down the track. The trainmen say that she gave the signals with her hands, showing a perfect familiarity with the code. Engineer Fox hastened to heed the warning thus conveyed, bringing the train to a stop in short order. Afterwards the men hastened to communicate with Janesville headquarters and the girl resumed her journey to her home as if nothing out of the ordinary had happened.

Worked There All Night
It was found upon inspection that twenty-five ties and side-timbers had been destroyed. The origin of the fire is traced to the train which left Janesville at 11:15 a. m. and crossed the bridge a few minutes later. A crew was hurried to the scene and worked throughout the entire night and until ten o'clock this morning rebuilding the structure. No limitation to that effect comes from the railroad officials, but it is to be anticipated that the St. Paul road will endeavor to reward in some way the brave young woman whose prompt action saved the lives of its men and thousands of dollars' worth of property.

ACTUAL WORK ON NEW ROUNDHOUSE

ENGINEERS AND GANG OF LABORERS DRIVING STAKES.

BEGIN DIGGING TOMORROW

Building Will Be Immediately In Rear of Old Structure—To Move John Nash's House.

This morning the first actual work toward the erection of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway company's roundhouse in this city was commenced. Only the primary operations of staking off the location and preparations for excavating were attempted today, but it is expected that tomorrow "digging" for the foundation will begin. A. G. Bennett of Chicago, one of the road's assistant engineers, is in charge and will superintend the building. Assisting him with the engineering work are W. E. Duckett and George A. Richardson, while Charlie Woodruff, all three from the Windy City, is in charge of the laborers. At present but twenty-four workmen are being used but this number will be greatly increased soon.

In Rear of Old House
The new house will occupy a site immediately in the rear of the structure now being used. The front wall will be about twenty feet from the rear of the old and the back wall will stand some thirty feet east of the Nash home. The machine-shop plans have not as yet been completed, but this building will probably adjoin the house on the south end. John Nash has been given till winter to move his dwelling from the property which he recently sold to the railroad company. He expected this morning that the work would be started this noon. The house will be moved onto some property on Chatham street which Mr. Nash owns.

A Concrete Foundation
The new roundhouse will have eleven stalls and on week days every engine will be well accommodated. Could a site have been secured the St. Paul company would have erected even a larger building, for on Sundays the present Janesville work is too heavy for a house the size of the new one. The foundation and the walls up to the window sills will be of concrete, reinforced with iron bars, and the remainder will be of brick. The orders from Milwaukee headquarters were to have the building ready for occupancy before cold weather, but this will be impossible unless early work is delayed much longer than usual. The work will rush with all possible speed and it may be that it will be completed in the middle of the winter.

WHICH DAY WILL BE CHOSEN THIS YEAR

Five Thursdays in November Make Question As To Thanksgiving Day Holiday.

Many people have noticed the fact that calendars differ this year on the date of Thanksgiving day for 1905. Some of them mark November 23 and others 30. There are five Thursdays in November, which is unusual. The information says that it is usual for the President to proclaim the last Thursday as Thanksgiving day, but there is an idea among some that the day proclaimed is the Thursday after the third Thursday. This would bring Thanksgiving on the 23d. Since the calendar makers have differed and little information is at hand, the doubtful have concluded to wait patiently and see what President Roosevelt says about it in the fall.

STOCKMAN VS. WIBOM CASE IN JUSTICE COURT

Is Being Tried Before Judge Reeder and a Jury in Presence of Large Gallery.

In Justice Reeder's court today the taking of testimony in the action brought by Hugh Stockman against G. D. Wibom to collect about $40 in wages which he claims the defendant owes him was continued. The defendant has put in a counter claim for about $50 for injury to horses and about $15 for damage to a buggy, alleged to have been sustained through the carelessness of the plaintiff. The jury trying the case is composed of John Nolan, Phil Sheridan, John Weber, William Williams, Thomas Costigan, and Harry Schmidley. Testimony which may interest the district attorney was given by the plaintiff with regard to the expenditure of $3 on a rather hilarious night at Indian Ford, whether he went on horseback from the farm near Milton on one occasion. There will probably be no ruling on the case until tomorrow.

MAYOR SENDS A WORD TO WISE

REGARDING SUNDAY CLOSING LAW FOR SALOONS.

BARS OPEN ON SABBATH

Have Been Reported To Him And He Reminds All Proprietors of An Ordinance of Honored Memory.

Before departing for Brodhead this morning, Mayor J. P. Hinchinson directed that there be served on each saloon proprietor of the city today a warning to the effect that there is a Sunday closing ordinance on the city's books and that several violations of this ordinance have recently come to his notice. The officers who carried this message phrased it in various ways, sometimes stating in so many words that "the saloons were to be closed on Sundays, by the mayor's orders." Considerable surprise was expressed by the recipients and some of them immediately offered suggestions concerning the drugstore. In most cases, however, the officer did not wait to witness the effect of his words. While the sentiment for a closed town cannot truthfully be said to be universal or anything approaching universality, there is a feeling even among those who want an open town, that many of the saloons are conducted altogether too openly on the day of rest—that, too, many pedestrians turn off the main traveled ways to the alleys on the Sabbath day, constituting at times a series of processions almost as imposing as the ones that wind their way to the churches and what is more—simultaneously.

BRIEF NEWS ABOUT TOWN

In the Adirondacks. Mr. and Mrs. J. Q. Timmons returned last night from a four weeks' visit in Fenelon county, New York state, the old home of Mr. Timmons. It was the latter's first visit there in forty years. On a forty-mile drive through the Adirondacks the Janesville people had the good fortune to catch sight of several deer and bears.

Lectured by Judge: Last night two sixteen-year-old youngsters, named Dan and Flyn, engaged in a lively twenty-minute mill with no resting intervals, on one of the Dodge street corners. The inquiries of neither were serious and after a severe lecture by Judge Piffel in municipal court this morning they were allowed to depart.

The Last Truss Up: The last of the four trusses that will support the roof of the Cargill Memorial church were put in place today.

Mr. and Mrs. D. A. Ryan and Miss M. L. is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Charles Wesley, at 206 Washington street.

"I used to think," said Uncle Allen Sparks, "that it was a foolish thing for a woman, when she is out walking and meets another woman, to turn her head and look at the dress of the other one, but I'm likely to change my mind about that. I know just one woman who never does it, and she's getting a stiff and rheumatic neck, probably from lack of exercise."

JOHN FARSON IS IN CITY TODAY

NEW OWNER OF THE INTERURBAN LOOKS OVER LINE.

MAY EXTEND TO MADISON

Mr. Farson Discusses This Phase of The Situation With Friends in Course of His Visit.

John Farson of the firm of Farson, Leach & Company of Chicago, owners of the Rockford and Freeport and one of the new owners of the Rockford, Beloit & Janesville interurbans, was in the city this morning with a party of friends. While Mr. Farson's visit may have been merely one of inspection of his new property, from conversations he had with several prominent business men his visit presages the possible extension of the Rockford-Janesville line to Madison. Mr. Farson is a wide-awake aggressive hustler with plenty of money to back any enterprise he may undertake and if he decides to extend the line from this city to Madison he will bring his plans to consummation.

Talks Franchise
Mr. Farson this morning talked of asking the council for a franchise for his proposed extension. He intimates that should he decide to do this the franchise application would also include a freight-carrying clause, which would be essential to make the road a good paying investment. On every side Mr. Farson met encouragement and merchants with whom he discussed the question of the proposed extension all stated the freight clause would be available asset to the city's interest. It would be a good thing for Janesville to have a man like Farson interested in its welfare and every encouragement that is possible should be given him and his project.

Accompanied by Friends
Mr. Farson was accompanied by his son, John, Jr., a member of his father's firm; also by D. F. Moore, auditor of the Railway Inspectors' bureau of Chicago; Geo. M. Ambrose of the Oak Park Arms and Supt. Stovell. The party made the run from Chicago to Rockford in one of Mr. Farson's 40-horse-power touring cars yesterday afternoon, took the trolley line to Freeport and visited the Methodist conference now in session in that city, came to Janesville over the interurban and returned to Chicago this afternoon.

FRACTURED COLLAR BONE IN FOOTBALL

Floyd Davis Victim of Scrimmage Pile While Practicing With High School Eleven.

Floyd Davis, one of the candidates for the high school football team, was the victim of an unlucky bit of scrimmage work while the teams were practicing in the rear of the Grant school building yesterday afternoon, receiving a broken collar bone. Though his garments were heavily padded about the shoulders nothing protected the forward parts of his collar bones and in a small monkey pile the sudden pressure of another player's knee was sufficient to cause the fracture. It was believed at first that the bone simply cracked, but the doctor's examination later proved the injury to be a break.

A Romance of the Days When the Lord Redeemed the Children of Israel From the Bondage of Egypt

By Elizabeth Miller

Copyright, 1904, by the Bobbs-Merrill Company

"Seven days ago, under an evil star, a veiled woman came to the temple of Bast, in the village of image makers, and made offerings to the idol. She remained in the shrine, praying, for a time without reason, as though she pretended to worship, until a certain space should elapse. At the end of the hour in which she came another woman, closely covered, her mouth hidden, entered and knelt near her. In a little they arose and went forth together, and Jambres, who is priest at the little temple, grown suspicious by reason of their behavior, looked after them. The wind swayed the garments of the second stranger and showed the foot and ankle of a man. Filled with wonderment, Jambres laid aside his priest's robes and, garbing himself like a wayfarer, followed. They left the village, going east where the road leached along the canal, which is hidden by the sprouts of young trees. Farther up the way were servants who waited for the man and woman, but the two stepped out of earshot and sat by the road to talk.

"Jambres, hidden in the fringe of bushes behind, heard them.

"They laid a snare. And thou, O prince, wast to be trapped therein."

Seti's eyes were veiled and his face showed a heightening of color.

"Thou wast to come to the temple in the village of image makers with treasure to give into the hands of Moses. Thy message to my brother was to be delivered by the Princess Ta-user. She delivered it not. The word she should have brought came to Moses by a son of Belial, a godless Hebrew, sent by Jambres, for the brotherhood of priests would have had Moses come to the temple for their own ends. But the servants of the Lord God of Israel are keen eyed and they know a jackal from a hare. However, these matters I did not hear from the people. All that I heard in Pithom may be talked openly over Egypt.

"The man and the woman laid their plans, and they were these: Last night the man and his servants were to lie at Pithom and today they were to meet thee at the temple of Bast, overpower thee, take thy treasure and, with the woman, fly to some secure place. With the treasure they were to hire them soldiers—mercenaries—and take arms against the king, thy father."

The speaker paused again. Seti's breast labored, and his gaze was fixed upon the Hebrew.

"The ire of Jambres was kindled against the plotters, and he called an assembly of the priests within short distances from the village of image makers and laid his discoveries before them. They pledged themselves to proceed to Pithom last night, which was the night they came together in council, and take the traitors. But one among their number, a young priest who knew the woman, played them false, entered the city before his fellows and warned the plotters. They had fled, with the priests in pursuit.

"My son, the man was Siptah, son of Amon-meses; the woman, the Princess Ta-user."

The prince's face took on an insane beauty. In each cheek was a scarlet stain—his lips smiled without parting, and his eyes glittered. He did not question the Hebrew's story. Something within him corroborated every word. He sprang to his feet and with an unnatural laugh flung his hand above his head.

"Now, by Horus," he cried, "I must get back to Tanis. I would ask the pardon of Ramesses."

Aaron arose and laid detaining hands upon him.

"I did not tell thee this that I might be a bearer of evil tidings. I came forth to meet thee that thou mightest save thyself. For be it from me to bring misfortune upon Israel's one friend in Egypt's high places. Return to Tanis with all speed and take the treasure with thee. Then only will the intent rest against thee."

"Not so," Seti interrupted harshly. "Will thou rob me of the one balm to my humiliation? Will thou defeat me also in the one good deed I would do? Take thou the treasure and be glad it fell into the hands of the wanton. Let me depart."

But Aaron was planted in his way.

"Knowest thou not what they will do with thee? Thou wouldst have given aid to the enemy of Egypt. Thou knowest the penalty. Sooner would Israel make it a garment of sackcloth and feed upon ulms than yield thee up to thine enemies for thy gold's sake."

But Seti would not hear him. "I care not what they do with me," he said. "The gods grant they lay upon me the extreme weight of the law. I go back to Tanis as one returneth to his beloved."

He shook off the Israelite's hands, ordered the black to give the treasure over to the Hebrew and, flinging himself upon his horse, galloped furiously toward Tanis.

The pickets on the outer wall of Tanis halted him, but when they beheld his face their pikes fell, and, with hands on knees, they bade him pass. The palace sentries started and gave him room.

The great palace hall was crowded and full of excitement. Menephah had summoned the court to the royal presence.

In his left above the throne stood the king, purple with rage. The queen, in her place at his side, was staying his onstriched hand. Below at his right stood Ramesses, the kindest presence that ever graced a royal sitting. At the left of Menephah was

He raised his hand over the boy's head.

He raised his hand over the boy's head, expected the prince. He raised his hand and extended it for a moment over the boy's head and went forth.

The strength went from Seti's limbs, the passion from his brain, and when Ramesses, with grim purpose in his face, beckoned him he obeyed meekly and prostrated himself before the angry king.

CHAPTER XXV.

THE distance by highway between Memphis and Tanis was eighty miles, a little more than two days' ride by horseback. Masanath had required two weeks to accomplish that distance. She refused to travel except in the cool of the morning and of the afternoon. If she felt the fatigue of an hour's journey, she rested a day at the next town. She consulted astrologers and moved forward only under propitious signs. She insisted on following the Nile until she was opposite Tanis, instead of taking the highway at On and continuing across the delta.

She was now within ten miles of Tanis, fourteen days after her departure from Memphis.

It was near sunset when a company of royal guards, under Moses, rode up from the north.

The captain flung himself from his horse and hurried to Masanath's litter.

"Holy Isis! Lady Masanath!" he exclaimed, "where in all Egypt hast thou hidden thyself these fourteen days? The whole army of the north hath been searching after thee, and Ramesses hath raved like a madman since that day long past on which thou shouldst have arrived in Tanis."

"I have been on the way," she answered loftily. "The haste of the prince is unseemly. I would not fatigue myself nor court disaster by incautiousness these perilous days."

"Perchance thou hast been famished these fourteen days in the matter of court gossip," the captain said. "Wherefore I am come as thy informant with such news as thou shouldst know. For, being ignorant of the infidelities in the household of the king, it may be that thou wouldst ask after the little prince, Seti, and wherefore the queen appears no more at the side of the Pharaoh nor speaks with thy lord nor sees thy noble father, and, furthermore, where Ta-user hath taken herself and other things which would embarrass thee to hear answered openly."

Masanath roused herself and prepared to listen. Serious words from the lips of the light hearted captain were not common, and when he spoke in that manner it was time to take heed.

"I had heard of the little prince's misfortune and of the treason of Ta-user and her party and the plucking of a price upon her head, but nothing more hath come to mine ears. Is there more of a truth?"

"Remember, I pray thee," the captain replied, riding near to her, "that I bring thee this for thine own sake, not for the love of talebearing. On the counsel of Ramesses—this day the Pharaoh sentenced Seti to banishment for a year to the mines of Libya."

"To the mines!" Masanath cried in horror.

"Not as a laborer—nay, the sentence was not so harsh—but as a scribe to the governor over them."

"It matters little," she declared indignantly. "The boy prince—the poor, misguided young brother—sent to a year of banishment, a lifelong humiliation! Libya, the death country! Now, was anything more brutal? Nay, it is like Ramesses!"

She sank back in the shadows of her litter, covered her face with her hands and shuddered because of the imminence of her trial.

So they journeyed on till at last Masanath fell asleep, not from indifference, for her fears exhausted her, but because her mind still retained babyhood's way of comforting itself when too roughly beset.

She was aroused in the middle of the first watch by the passage of her litter between bewildering stretches of lights. She was within the palace. The soldiers that bore her were tramping over a Damascus carpet and between long lines of groveling attendants, through an atmosphere of overwhelming perfume. The messenger had been swift and the court had had time to prepare to greet the coming crown princess with propriety.

After the first spasms of terror Masanath set her teeth and prepared to endure. She was borne to the doors of the throne room, and two nobles, gorgeously habited, set the carved steps beside the litter for her feet.

Without hesitation she descended.

The great hall was ablaze with light and lined with courtiers. The Pharaoh, with the queen by his side again, was in his place under the canopy.

Har-hat, glittering with gems and rustling in snow white robes, approached with triumph in his face to embrace her. But within three steps he paused as suddenly as though he had been commanded. He bent his knee and kissed the proffered hand. He had become the subject of his daughter.

She suffered him to lead her to the royal dais, where she knelt. The queen descended, raised her and led her to the throne. Menephah met them, kissed Masanath's forehead and blessed her. The queen embraced her and returned to her place beside the Pharaoh.

Masanath turned to the right of the royal dais and faced the prince. Thus far her greetings had not been hard. Now was the supreme test. Har-hat conducted her within a few paces of the prince and stepped aside. What followed was to prove Masanath's willingness.

Jambres stood in the center of a slightly raised platform, which was carpeted with gold edged purple. Behind him was his great chair. But for the badge of princelhood, the fringed ribbon dependent from a gem crusted amulet over each temple, his habiliments were the same as the Pharaoh's.

Masanath's face fell, and she approached the prince with slow steps. Within three paces of the platform she paused and sank to her knees. It was done. She had acknowledged the betrothal and knelt to her lord. Ramesses raised her. He lifted the badge of princelhood from his forehead, shortened the fillet from which it hung, so that it would fit her small head, and set it on her brow.

The great palace shook with the acclaim of the courtiers. Taking Masanath's hand, Ramesses led her down the hall through the bending ranks of purple wearing Egyptians to the great portals of the hall. There he gave her into the hands of a troop of court ladies, clad as leopards and gorgeous as butterflies, who led her with many stately obeisances to her apartments.

After a sumptuous meal Masanath surveyed herself with a swift glance in a plate of polished silver, which was her mirror, and then, darning out of her door, ran down the corridor as though she would outstrip repentance before it overtook her.

She came upon him whom she sought. He was on the point of entering his apartments. He paused with his hands on the curtains and waited for her.

"A boon, my lord," she panted, chiefly from trepidation.

"A boon! Thou wouldst ask a boon of me? Nay, I will not promise, for it may be thou comest to ask thy freedom, and that I will not grant for spleen."

Still she curbed herself. "Nay, O prince. I am come to ask naught of thee which a wife may not justly ask of her lord."

"What is the boon that thou mayest justly ask of me?"

"My father."

"I am no longer in debt to thy father."

"I ask no favor for my father at thy hands. Rather am I come to crave a boon for myself. My father asked an Israelite maiden at the hands of the Pharaoh a year ago, and she was beloved by my friend and thine. She fled from my father and was hidden by the man she loved."

"Aye, I know the story. Hotep brought it to mine ears months ago. The man was Kenekenes, and thy father overtook him and threw him into prison in Tape. What more?"

"The Israelite is gone, and my father's servants are still seeking for her, and I would not have her taken."

"Thou art a queen. What is she, a slave to thee?"

"A sister, my comforter, my one friend!"

"Thou canst find sisters and comforters and friends among highborn women of Egypt. I had laid Kenekenes' folly concerning this Israelite to the moonshine genius in him. But the slave is a sorceress, for the madness touches whosoever looks upon her."

"It is her goodness and her grace that win, Ramesses. If that be so, let it prevail the world over. Give her freedom and save her spotlessness."

"Har-hat shall not take her. I promise thee. I shall send her back to her place in the brick fields."

Masanath recoiled in horror. "To the brick fields!" she cried. "Rachet to the brick fields!"

"I have said. Her Israelitish spotlessness will be secure there, and the reduction of her charms will be the saving of Kenekenes."

"Not as a laborer—nay, the sentence was not so harsh—but as a scribe to the governor over them."

"Turn me away, my lord," she begged. "See what havoc I have wrought for Rachel when I sought to help her, and behold the honey of thy boast of love for me—my first boon and thou dost deny it!"

He laughed, and, slipping an arm about her, pressed her to him.

"First am I a king—next a lover," he said. "Thy prayer seeketh to come between me and my rule over the Israelites. Ask for something which hath naught to do with my scepter."

Crushed and stunned with despair and horror, Masanath made her way to her apartments in a mist of tears.

Former Comptroller of the Treasury Tells Bankers That Any Attempt to Make Laws Along this Line Must React on Individuals.

Louisville, Ky., Oct. 5.—The government has no right to meddle with railroad rate making, said James H. Eckels, former comptroller of the currency and president of the Commercial National Bank of Chicago, at the meeting of the Kentucky Bankers' association. He said:

"It has become a fashion to denounce railroads and ask that the law be invoked to regulate the business of a dozen or a thousand men. No one would dare to invoke legislation to control the business of a private individual."

"Any attempt to legislate on such questions as are purely of a business nature and to take from the owner the virtual management of his business is a mistake which will bring national disaster and the public in general and not individuals will suffer."

"If the thoughtful citizen—I mean neither the partisan nor political demagogue—but if the thoughtful citizen will investigate he will learn that nowhere in the world do railroads do as much for so small a sum as in this country."

Benefit to the Farmer.

"Whatever the stockholder may have earned in juggling stocks, the amount is infinitesimal to the great wealth which the construction of great railroads and manufacturing plants has brought in the aggregate to the merchant, the manufacturer and farmer, and the greatest of all these is the farmer."

"Here of late we have heard much talk of 'high finance,'" continued Mr. Eckels. "I admit there have been some transactions unworthy of the name which reflected on the credit of the profession. But there is far more of conscience employed in the acquisition and use of wealth than of evil. There are some who stand in high places, and denounce great aggregations of capital. I would suggest that they look about and see where our great national industries would have come from had it not been for the long list of honest, upright men, who have contributed to the national wealth."

President is in Earnest.

Washington, Oct. 5.—President Roosevelt is in dead earnest on the subject of railroad rate legislation, and is just as determined as ever that legislative regulations shall be enacted looking to federal supervision of the freight rate situation."

This statement was made by Representative Townsend of Michigan, one of the authors of the so-called Esch-Townsend railroad rate bill which passed the house of representatives last winter, after a conference with President Roosevelt.

"Have any suggestions been made of changes in the Esch-Townsend measure?" Mr. Townsend was asked.

"Some changes may be made," replied Mr. Townsend, "but they will be for the purpose of making the bill clearer on certain points. It is intended, of course, to include in the regulations private cars, refrigerator cars and terminal charges."

ITALIAN FATALLY SHOT IN BED

Atlantic City Black Hand Attack Made Under Guise of Robbery.

Atlantic City, N. J., Oct. 5.—Gigliano Pisce, an Italian, was fatally shot while lying in bed. The attack was made by a masked man under the guise of robbery, but the police express the belief that it was the result of a "Black Hand" plot. The man demanded money and as Mrs. Pisce handed him a purse he shot her husband. Pisce is dying at a hospital. His assailant escaped.

How Is Your Heart?

Is your pulse weak, too slow, too fast, or does it skip a beat? Do you have shortness of breath, weak or hungry spells, fainting, smothering or choking spells, palpitation, fluttering, pains around the heart, in side and shoulder, or hurt when lying on left side?

If you have any of these symptoms your heart is weak or diseased, and cannot get better without assistance.

Dr. Miles' Heart Cure strengthens weak hearts, and rarely ever fails to cure heart disease. Try it, and see how quickly you will find relief.

"About January 1st, 1902, I took down with weakness and dropsy and gradually grew worse. I was told by my family physician that my case was hopeless. My neighbors and family had given me up to die. My limbs and body were swollen to one-third larger than normal size, and I could not get around my heart. For at least three months I had to sit propped up in bed to keep from smothering. I sent for five bottles of Dr. Miles' Heart Cure, and by the time I had taken them, all my swelling had disappeared. I was entirely cured. I am now as well as I have been for twenty years, and I am able to do any kind of work on my farm. My attending physician told me that if it had not been for Dr. Miles' Heart Cure I would now be in my grave."

Bishop Shows No Indication of Second Paralytic Stroke.

Louisville, Ky., Oct. 5.—The rumor that Bishop John L. Spalding of Peoria had a second stroke of paralysis Tuesday is without foundation, according to a statement issued by his cousin and attending physician, Dr. W. H. Wapner.

The bishop was brought from Lebanon to St. Anthony's hospital here.

"There need be no alarm, felt over the condition of Bishop Spalding," says Dr. Wapner. "It is all that could be desired and there is not the slightest indication of a second stroke of paralysis. His general health is first-class, his mind is absolutely unimpaired and, save for the trouble that prevents his taking the same exercise as formerly, he is in good health. I had the bishop brought here in order that he might be under my personal supervision. In a few days he will go to Indianapolis to visit Bishop Chatard, and from there to his old home in Peoria. I believe that he will ultimately regain the complete use of his left side."

PIMPLES ON THE FACE.
Certainly a very annoying and unsightly trouble is the condition of the skin of the face and sometimes the body, known as acne or pimples. A curious feature of this disorder is that it seldom is found in children or people who have passed middle life, although it is not unknown to both.

Youths, young men and women, suffer greatly sometimes, and the skin of the face presents a very unsightly appearance. The cause in some cases is found in unhygienic surroundings, poor ventilation, bad habits, poor food, improper methods of eating and nearly always constipation. The real cause of the pimples themselves is an effort upon the part of nature to throw off poisonous matter from the system which should have been eliminated through other channels. The pores of the skin are very small, especially so in the case of persons having a fine skin, and its normal function is to excrete waste matter in the insensible perspiration.

Under excessive heat or exertion, or even great mental excitement, the activity of the pores of the skin is greatly increased, and sensible perspiration flows freely. It is very common to lay the blame upon "impure blood," and I recently received a letter from an eastern subscriber asking advice for the case of a friend, stating that her physician had prescribed "Fowler's Solution" with apparently favorable results. Now, "Fowler's Solution" is simply arsenic put up according to a formula given years ago by Dr. Fowler, when it was fashionable for ladies to be indolent and helpless, with pale, waxy complexions, and it will certainly bring about that result. Of course, you can readily guess what my reply would be. Poison in all forms should not be prescribed. It is unnecessary, with one or two possible exceptions, under certain conditions which are not likely to occur in the home treatment of diseases.

Pimples will, as a rule, disappear from the face, as well as other portions of the body, if the sufferer will simply observe the Home Health Club system of using food and water according to the plan so fully described in the lectures, and all persons who wish to keep a clear skin must to a greater or less extent observe the natural laws taught.

It is true that by administering certain harmless home remedies the pimples and red blotches will all disappear and, in many cases, never return, because the reason for their appearance has been overcome. In most cases the simple, practical method of cleansing the system of impurities is best and will add greatly to the general good health.

CLUB NOTES.
Afton.—Dr. David H. Reeder, Laporte, Ind.—Dear Doctor: I have been feeling so well the greater part of the summer, but there has been one thing annoying me and I don't know the cause of it. I noticed about a month ago, when I first awoke in the morning that my hands were numb. I thought nothing of it at first, but it continued and never missed a single morning. In a few minutes the hands would seem to be all right, but would have two or three spells while dressing. After a short time they were all right again and did not bother any more until the next morning. The last two weeks there has been a half numb or tingling sensation in the fingers of right hand all the time, but worse in the morning. The left hand is the same, but right hand is worse. Can you tell me what the cause is and what to do for it? I would also like to ask you about my aunt. About four weeks ago she was out driving and the horse suddenly jerked the line, which seemed to have been around her index finger. At least the finger was jerked and sprained, as we suppose. She has used different remedies, but the finger is still swollen and stiff, except at the knuckle. It is not painful unless she strikes it against something, but it just sticks out straight and therefore is knocked a great deal. What shall we do for it? Thanking you in advance for these favors, I remain, sincerely, A. F.

The symptoms which you have described would indicate that there is more or less danger of a paralytic condition coming on unless you are properly cared for. I would suggest that you procure the services of a skillful osteopath and take a thorough course of treatment.

In regard to your aunt, your description of her finger would indicate that it might be dislocated or fractured, or possibly the periosteum is injured; and I think it would be wise for her to go to a reliable surgeon and have him make a careful examination. If there is an X-ray machine in the town, it would be of value to determine whether or not it was a dislocation, and is the place to go. It may be that she has merely injured the ligaments, and that it may be all right in the course of time. If I were to suggest a remedy for it, it would be one of the tissue elements to take out the inflammation.

Washington.—Dr. David H. Reeder, Laporte, Ind.—Dear Doctor: I write to you to learn something about my inability to endure hot weather. As I wrote you a year ago, I was overheat twice. I did not suffer a complete sunstroke at either time, but it proved a heavy shock to my system, especially the last time. I am simply worthless when the temperature is up to 80 or more, especially out in the sun where there is much reflection. I get nervous and weak and short of breath and just have to stop working. I have tried hard to overcome this trouble, but I must admit I have so far made a failure. I am sure a part of it is imaginative, as I have left the field to work inside, which I could do with little effort. I know that as I now am I can do almost nothing. I am just absolutely afraid to venture out any distance from shelter during the hot part of the day, for fear I will be overcome. I am feeling much better in other ways, because I weigh about ten pounds more than I usually do at this time of the year, which I believe is due to following your instructions. It is usually very dry and dusty here in the hot season and when it does rain it seems so much pleasanter that I sometimes think a moist climate would be better for me. I will leave the matter with you, hoping you may be able to help me out of my trouble. I greatly appreciate your interest and help, thus far in my behalf. May God bless you in your great work. Yours very sincerely, Rec. No. 10,300.

I agree with you that it will be necessary for you to go to a climate where the temperature does not get very high, or you will have to adopt some occupation which will enable you to remain in the shade during the hot season. There are many localities where you could go and probably do just as well as where you now are, perhaps better, and there would be no danger of being overcome by the heat. One place that I have in mind would be the Piedmont valley of Virginia; the climate there is perhaps as good as anywhere in the world; by living close to the mountainous portions of the valley during the summer time, you would never experience a very high temperature, and the sun would not affect you as it does where you are, while the winters do not get very cold. There is sufficient moisture in the air to overcome the sensation which you experience in the very dry atmosphere. I would suggest that you write to one of our club members there, whose name I have sent you. He would be glad to send you circulars describing the country. If you could adopt some line of work that would enable you to be indoors during the summer time, I think perhaps you would get along all right where you are.

Fontanelle.—Dr. David H. Reeder, Laporte, Ind.—Dear Doctor: We are subscribers to this paper and like your lectures very much. I thought I would write to you and see if you could help me about my hair. It is turning gray so fast. I am 22 years of age, and do not think it should be gray so soon. I have never had any bad sick spells, but I am nervous. If you can tell me what to do for it, I will be ever so much obliged to you. Yours truly—Miss I. E.

I know there are so many remedies advertised to prevent the hair from turning gray, but after many and costly investigations, I am forced to the conclusion that there is not, as yet, any preparation that I have ever heard of that will prevent it. It is a lack of a certain chemical element in the system, and if there is any possible way of supplying it, it would be through the tissue elements. The sample of hair which you sent, appears to be broken bits, as if it had been broken off in the comb. I found, but few if any roots. The Home Health Club method of treatment for the hair, as described in the book of Lectures would be the best method of treatment that I could possibly suggest to you. The scalp would also be stimulated by the use of a vegetable remedy of which I have often spoken in these columns. I am inclined to suspect that the cause of the hair turning gray in your case is nervousness and worry. Overcome these things, and I believe you will notice an improvement.

Smoke Stories.
According to accounts the Japanese are experts in smoke rings, and in Japan it is considered no uncommon trick to blow three rings of smoke in succession, the second traveling through the first and the third through both. Some stage performers become so expert in smoke blowing that they are not only able to multiply the number of rings thus formed, but actually form Japanese characters representing words and even sentences. One Japanese juggler, it is declared, proposed to his wife by forming the characters representing "his avowal of love through a thin stream of smoke."

The Horse in London.
A patient observer on one of the main roads near London counted the vehicles passing to and from the metropolis between nine o'clock in the morning and nine at night. The results were: Bicycles, 4,377; motor cars, 557; electric street cars, 407; horse vehicles, 298; total, 5,539. According to these figures, the horse is rapidly being outnumbered.

PAYS MILLION IN BLACKMAIL
Three-Fourths of Insurance Bills Said to Be Hold-up Measures.
AGENT RETURNS NO VOUCHERS
Man Who Attends to Needs of Legislators in the Various States Is Not Called Upon to Render Itemized Accounts.

New York, Oct. 5.—In five years the New York Life Insurance Company has spent $1,103,920 for "supervising" legislation in the United States and Canada. So testified John A. McCall, president of that company, before the Armstrong legislative insurance investigating committee.

In making the statement President McCall declared that three-fourths of the insurance bills introduced in the legislatures of the several states were blackmailing bills pure and simple.

Of the $1,103,920 paid by the New York Life for legislative supervision, $476,927 was paid to Andrew Hamilton, who spent it in the various states without returning vouchers or accounting for it to the company.

The $476,927 spent by Andrew Hamilton does not, however, include the $235,000 paid to him for use in acquiring real estate in the rear of the home office building.

The further fact was disclosed also that Hamilton, in addition to the $476,000 and the $235,000, has $75,000 more of the New York Life Insurance Company's money, which, so far as the testimony before the investigating committee shows, has never been accounted for. This $75,000 was paid to Hamilton in 1904 for the purpose originally of paying the state taxes on the New York Life's premiums for the year 1903. But the money, through an understanding with President McCall, was used by Hamilton in connection with his legislative work. This amount, taken with the other two sums mentioned above, makes a grand total of nearly $800,000 which has been paid to Hamilton alone by the New York Life in the last six years and for which, according to President McCall's testimony, the New York Life has had no vouchers except the "Judge's" receipts for the money.

Blackmail in Every State.
President McCall defended the expenditure of so large a sum of money for "supervising" legislation on the ground that the New York Life is "badgered and harassed to death" in every state in the union every year by the introduction of blackmailing or holdup bills. Three-fourths of the insurance bills introduced in state legislatures were purely for blackmail. It was for the purpose of combating these blackmailing bills that the New York Life maintained a legislative department.

President McCall denied that any of the $1,103,920 spent during the last five years had been used for bribing or corrupting legislatures. He denied that the New York Life was in a pool with the Equitable and the Mutual Life to look after legislation. He said the New York Life acted alone.

In regard to the contributions to the Republican national campaign committees amounting to $150,000, McCall declared that he had absolutely no understanding with the Republican managers in either of the three campaigns to which the New York Life contributed as to any favors which the New York Life or insurance companies in general might expect in return for the money.

Cover Up Campaign Gifts.
Mr. McCall reported that he had been unable after a most thorough search to find any entry on the New York Life's books of the payment of $50,000 in the campaign of 1896 or of the payment of an equal amount to the Republican national committee in 1900. These payments were made by Treasurer Gibbs, who is dead. The only way that President McCall could suggest in which Mr. Gibbs could have made the payments without leaving any records was in taking the $100,000 from the profits made in some transaction and reporting a smaller return than was actually made.

Mr. McCall explained how it was that after the campaign in 1896 Theodore Banta, the cashier of the New York Life, had made an affidavit for Gov. Culberson of Texas to the effect that the New York Life had not contributed to the campaign fund.

The fact was brought out that President McCall has had a call loan of $50,000 from the Metropolitan Life Insurance company for two years, paying an interest rate of only 1 1/2 per cent. It will be recalled that John R. Hegeman, president of the Metropolitan Life Insurance company, carried a loan for an equal amount at the same interest rate with the New York Life for several years. Mr. McCall is a director of the Metropolitan Life, but he said that he could see no impropriety in his taking money from that institution at the rate of interest which he was paying.

Mr. Hughes, counsel for the committee, brought out also the fact that the New York Life owns an apartment house at 49 West Seventy-second street, in which four of the six apartments are occupied by relatives of President McCall. The company receives an income from this apartment representing .023 per cent on the investment.

KENTUCKY AS DIAMOND FIELD
South African Expert Discovers Indications There of Rich Deposits.
David Draper, diamond expert, of Johannesburg, South Africa, passed through Pittsburg the other night for Richmond, Va. He recently returned from Elliott county, Ky., where he investigated and inspected land between Ison and Creeches creeks, says a Pittsburg correspondent of the New York World. He is the first diamond mine expert from South Africa to investigate the possibilities of finding diamonds in Kentucky—pipes, as they are called in diamond mining.

The correspondent read the report Mr. Draper made of the mines through the courtesy of W. L. McGee, one of the owners of the land. Mr. Draper in his report said that if prospects had appeared on the surface in South Africa as they do in Elliott county, Ky., hundreds of thousands of dollars would have been invested in a thorough prospecting.

His report shows that garnets, ilmenite, olivine, opside and mica should be found in the deposits. So far reports of the finding of diamonds are legendary, but the thick growth of vegetation would preclude the possibility of finding the gems unless they were systematically searched for.

Mr. Draper calls attention to the fact that some of the Transvaal mines were discovered only after twenty-five years of prospecting, although it was evident to mining experts that diamonds existed there. He compares the cost of fuel and labor in Kentucky with that of South Africa, which is in favor of Kentucky.

He says the total cost of thoroughly prospecting the Kentucky property would aggregate $100,000. His report states further that he would not be surprised if the pipes were laid open that larger ones would be found in Kentucky than have ever been found in South Africa; also that it would require the finding of only five carats of stones per land in Kentucky to make the mine a paying one.

The earth thus dug out is left exposed to the atmosphere from four months to a year before it is sorted out, washed and the diamonds and other minerals removed. It would require two years' work thoroughly to exploit the property for precious stones.

His report states that nowhere has he found as good indications of diamonds as in the Kentucky field. The promoters of the enterprise have bought up 22,000 acres of land surrounding the ground, which will be opened.

CHIEF THREE MILES IN AIR
Head of Chicago Police Began Airship From Overhead.

Chief of Police Collins of Chicago discovered the other night that his jurisdiction has three dimensions instead of two within which he is commonly called upon to exercise authority and maintain order, says a Chicago special dispatch to the Washington Post. In addition to length and breadth it has three miles of height, impinging to that extent upon the region above. The chief says it is all covered in an ordinance which he really could not bring himself to quote out of hand.

The chief made this announcement when he was shown a telegram announcing the intention of A. Roy Knabenshue of Toledo, the aeronaut, to visit Chicago in a few days and circle about the dome of the Masonic temple in his craft. The chief was horror-stricken.

"I'm chief for three miles," he said. "He'll have to fly high. He will not be permitted to run up that machine within the city limits and if he goes up from the outside he'll have to stay over three miles. He can't risk his life in his jurisdiction."

LION AS "FIGHTING EDITOR"
Indiana Man Training One to Take Care of Undesirable Visitors.

Clarence P. Wolfe, editor of a newspaper at New Harmony, Ind., proposes to put a lion on guard in his office to be the "fighting editor" in the event of any fighting having to be done, says a New Harmony dispatch. The lion is far from being tame, but Mr. Wolfe hopes he can train it to be docile as far as he is concerned.

While a circus was at New Harmony a few days ago a cage containing the lion was blown over in a storm, and the animal was badly injured. The circus manager could not take it with him, and Mr. Wolfe bought it for a mere song.

He says he will expect it to "take care" of persons who come to the office to object when the paper contains something which they do not like.

The cavalry had brass helmets with white horsehair. In 1793 both infantry and artillery officers had swords of saber form.

OMNIGRAMS!

Many a Want Advertisement is, essentially, a telegram—turned to an Omnigram; a message of extreme importance to some one person, but which, in order to search out the person, has to be body a "message general," or an Omnigram, addressed to EVERYBODY.

The housewife knows that, somewhere in the city, there is to be found an available servant girl—and if she knew her address she would send her a telegram. Not knowing it she sends her an Omnigram—puts her message in a want advertisement, to be read by all servants looking for places, thus reaching the right one, the "available" one, by also reaching a few "wrong ones."

The man who has a horse to sell—or a cow, a city lot, a bond, a piece of machinery, a bicycle, a step-ladder or a store, knows that, somewhere in the city or near it, lives THE ONE BEST BUYER—the man to whom he can sell to best advantage. Again, a telegram would be quicker—or a trip to see him—if he knew the address. But, as he does not, he must put his offer, his message, into the form of a want advertisement, and trust to the far-reaching effects of an OMNIGRAM.

YOU SHOULD BE ABLE TO FIND TWICE AS MANY USES FOR OMNIGRAMS AS FOR TELEGRAMS—AND IF YOU DO NOT YOU ARE OVERLOOKING SOME OF THE "TRICKS OF PROSPERING."

BUT WHETHER YOU CALL YOUR MESSAGE A WANT ADVERTISEMENT, A CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENT, AN ADLET OR AN OMNIGRAM—THIS FORM OF PUBLICITY IS ONE OF THE REAL FORCES OF TO-DAY'S LIFE—SIMPLIFYING THE PROBLEMS THAT WOULD "STUMP" A SILLYLOCK HOMES—FINDING THE MAN OR THE THING YOU WANT WITH AMAZING QUICKNESS—UNTWISTING TANGLES IN HOME AND OFFICE—INTRODUCING PEOPLE WHO HAVE BUSINESS TO DO WITH EACH OTHER—TYPIFYING GEORGE ELIOT'S DEFINITION OF WIT, "A FORM OF FORCE WHICH LEAVES THE LIMBS AT REST."
